Macy Log House
Macy Drive, LaVale
1860's

Macy Log House was built prior to 1867 on a tract of land known as "Resurvey of Grove Camp". The house stands only thirty-three feet from the center of the Eckhart Branch of Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad. In later years the house was inhabited by the Wigger and Macy families. Logs were the most popular and affordable means of construction in this area of abundant forests.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Macy Log House is located at 1 Macy Drive in LaVale.

The building originally consisted of a two story, three bays wide logs structure covered with ship lap and german siding. It rests on a high stone foundation of random rubble with a plain water table. The gable flank roof is covered with ribbed tin. Eaves consist of a cornice, soffit, and bedmould. Wall features include two rectangular ventilators in the exposed gable end of the original. Two corbeled brick chimneys are inside end of the original.

The main entrance is in the center of the northwestern facade. Windows are six over six lights, pegged and pedimented with wooden lugsills.

Three frame additions with german siding are on this house. On the southeast is a two story, gabled addition with two over two light windows. An addition abutting the gable end of the original is gabled with a poured cement foundation and french doors. A low hip roofed addition is on the southwest.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Josephus Everstine owned parts of the tracts "Resurvey of Pleasant Valley" and "Resurvey of Grove Camp." (1) Macy Log House located on one of those tracts was built prior to 1867 when it was assessed for fifty dollars. (2) The house stands only thirty-three feet from the center of the Eckhart Branch of the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad, built in 1845. (3) In later years the building was inhabited by the Wigger and Macy families. (4)

Logs were the most popular and affordable means of construction in rural areas during the earlier two thirds of the 19th century. Abundant forests of this area provided an ample supply of building material. Although later additions have obscured the original two story, three bays wide log structure Macy Log House is a reminder of the resourcefulness of the earlier settlers of Allegany County.
